Researching Your Native American Ancestry

Are you Native American?

Are you one of those individuals who grew up hearing that you were part Native American, but had no idea how to prove it? Perhaps you were even told that part of your family came over on the Trail of Tears. You want to know more about it and perhaps see if you might be able to register as a member of a tribe, but don't know where to start. Many individuals researching their family tree have the same problem.

They know there is Native American lineage from family stories, but have no idea where to find proof. So how do you begin? Where do you get the information you will need?

To find your ancestors, it would be helpful to know their approximate years of birth and the names of their parents, spouse(s), children, etc. But before you get that far, start with what you know, which means starting with yourself and working backwards. Find out as much information as you can about your parents, grandparents, and more distant ancestors. Write the information down. Always include maiden names for females, if known. Females will be listed under that name until they were married. Include dates and places of births, marriages, and deaths and include the places your ancestors lived between

From the President

Here in a couple of months we as a Society will be celebrating our one year anniversary. I am so proud of our membership in making this a group that works together to accomplish what needs to be done. We have raised funds, completed projects, and acquired new members. What a great group to be a member of.

In doing the inventory in our genealogy library, I found that we have some very old newsletters and books. I even found a name that I already knew about but it was good to see it again. However, I see that we do need to receive donated books or order more research books from other societies. This will be a project for 2015 to try to order more books and microfilm. And as a genealogist, I often wonder who will continue what we have started when we can't get around anymore. It's very hard to get young people interested in genealogy. But our society is much honored to have two young ladies as members.

Amber Upton along with her grandmother Sue Roebuck help monitor the Heritage Room at the library almost every Tuesday morning. She helps with putting books back in the proper place and to keep the room in an orderly manner. Amber also takes lessons to speak the Choctaw Language.

Our second young lady is Amy Burkhalter. Amy is a student at the Ft. Towson, OK, school. She recently was honored as a sophomore with having three years of perfect attendance. I needed someone to be a 'Welcome' person to people who came to our society meetings but were not members. I appointed Amy to greet visitors, make sure they signed in, give them a 'Welcome Packet' and introduce them to the Society when the meeting started. She accepted this position and has done a great job. Don't forget to read the story of Amy's genealogy project with 4-H in this issue.

Local Teen Educates Youth on Genealogy

By Amy Burkhalter

I pledge my head to clearer thinking, my heart to greater loyalty, and my hands to helping my community learn about genealogy. Ok so maybe that isn't the 4-H pledge, but it is what one member of the Choctaw County Genealogical Society strived to do this summer. Amy Burkhalter is the youngest member of the Choctaw County Genealogical Society, an organization which hopes to unmask Choctaw County's genealogical history. Amy is also a the Choctaw County 4-H Co-President. This summer she combined those two worlds into one educational experience for our area's youth. Each year, at the county extension office, 4-H Day Camps are held all throughout the month of June. Children who attend these camps learn about a wide variety of skills and projects they can accomplish through 4-H. These children learn how to cook, build, and in one particular case they learned the importance of genealogy. Amy Burkhalter taught a class on how to make Heritage Books, which is a project that combines crafting, genealogy, 4-H, and imagination all into one activity. During this class the kids learned how to make a tombstone rubbing, how to start their own family tree, and how to create their very own scrapbook page to begin their Heritage books. Hopefully when the county fair rolls around there will be several Heritage books on display with some first place ribbons decorating their covers. The Choctaw Genealogical Society and Choctaw County 4-H see this class as a way to open children's minds to history and also creativity at the same time. Even if you aren't a young 4-H-er you can still research your family's history. Just contact the Choctaw County Genealogical Society through their website at www.okgenweb.org/~ccgs2.

Amy Burkhalter & her 4-H Day Camp Class

Talk to or write other family members and ask them to share what they know. They often have information or documentation you need. Another family member may also be working on your family tree and you can share information, or work together and get the job completed faster!

You may already have most of what you need at home. Sources of information (or clues to the facts of the past) can come from birth certificates, marriage licenses, death certificates, divorce decrees, newspaper clippings, family bibles, diaries and letters. Try local and state government offices as well. Check out the county courthouse for records on marriages, divorces, deeds and wills (probate). Cemetery records are also sometimes useful. A great place to find cemetery information (birth and death dates on tombstones) without having to actually go to the cemetery is by looking at the searchable website www.findagrave.com. Also, check with your local librarian to see what county and state history books are on file that might contain information you need. If you know the area your ancestors lived in, check with those libraries as well to see what great discoveries you can make on the county's history. County histories help fill in the gaps in information and many times answer questions as to why people relocate and where they went. Most large city libraries have an area dedicated to genealogy. Many university libraries also have genealogical and historical collections available to researchers as well.

Genealogical and historical societies, both local and state, are good sources of information. Many have copies of county school records, family histories, censuses, old newspapers, cemetery records and funeral home records, etc. Also, many online genealogical sites such www.rootsweb, www.ancestry.com and

www.familysearch.org have searchable online databases that may help. Many people post their family trees on these sites as well and information can be gained that way too. You may find some of your ancestors included in someone else's tree.

Another great way to find out information about your family is by researching the US Census records, which are accessible online. The US Census Bureau releases census records every ten years. The last census released was the 1940 census. You can search the census by name and find your relatives who were living in 1940 on these records. By locating them, you will find out names of persons who lived in your family members' households at the time the census was recorded. Their ages at the time of the recording will be listed as well, which will give you clues to dates of birth.

There are always other people who can help you do the work if you do not want to do it yourself. Certified genealogists are available for a fee. Contact the Board of Certification of Genealogists (P.O. Box 14291, Washington, DC 20044 www.bcgcertification.org) or the Association of Professional Genealogists (PO Box 40393, Denver, CO 80204 www.apgen.org) and request their listings of genealogical researchers for hire.

Once you have your names and dates together for your ancestors as far back as you can go, put your information together in a document that makes sense. If you don't have access to a family pedigree chart to list your information on (these are available online from any genealogical site and are usually free) simply write the information onto a page in a format that is easy to understand. List yourself, your parents, your grandparents, great –grandparents with their dates and places of birth and death (if applicable) and begin your search in the Dawes books for anyone who may have registered as Native American.

Keep in mind before you begin your research that to apply for a CDIB (Certificate of Degree of Indian Blood) and tribal membership with the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma, you must be a descendent of someone listed as Choctaw - by blood or Mississippi Choctaw – by blood on the Final Rolls of Citizens and Freedmen of the Five Civilized Tribes in Indian Territory (commonly called the Dawes Commission Roll). That ancestor must have been living in Indian Territory during the 1898 to 1906 enrollment period and must have been able to prove their Choctaw heritage thus enrolling as Choctaw. So be sure that the ancestors you concentrate heavily on are direct ancestors. Information you collect along the way on aunts, uncles and cousins will be fun facts that you can include into your records for a more concise family tree.

If you believe you are a descendent from one of those tribal members and if your ancestor was not in Oklahoma (Indian Territory) during the enrollment dates, you will not be able to receive a CDIB or Tribal Membership. Only those tribal members living with the tribe in Indian Territory during that time period were eligible to be considered registered with the tribe. This is unfortunate that many people who know their ancestors were Native American but are not eligible to become members of their respective tribe.

Start with the Final Roll index to determine your ancestor's roll number. Many state and local historical and genealogical societies, large city libraries, and the Southwest Branch of the National Archives in Fort Worth, Texas, have copies of the Final Roll and Index. The rolls are searchable through the Oklahoma Historical Society's website

(http://www.okhistory.org/research/da wes). You can access the index online using the National Archives website http://www.archives.gov/research/nativ eamericans/dawes/intro.html). Once you have found your ancestor's name, their roll number will be located on the same line. Record the name and roll number. There are several different categories of enrollment: "by blood", "newborn", "minor" "by marriage", and "freedmen". The "by blood" category included those individuals enrolled with Indian blood. "Newborn" and "minor" categories included young children of Indian and freedmen parents. "By marriage" included individu-als with no Indian blood married to Indians. "Freedmen" were the former slaves of the Indians. Those individuals noted as

"Freedmen" did not have Indian blood, but were enrolled by the Dawes Commission because they had been "adopted" into the tribe. Using the roll book, locate the Choctaw tribe and category. The names will be listed in numerical order by the roll number. The listings will inlude the name, age, sex, blood degree, the category ("by blood", "minor", etc.) and census card number. Add this information to the name and roll number you recorded earlier.

If your goal is to apply for your CDIB card and membership and you have found verification that your ancestor was enrolled on the Dawes Commission Roll, then you have the information that you need to apply with your tribe. You will also need to provide an original state certified or death certificate for each person in your lineage back to the enrollee. If you have access to the internet, you can download the CDIB and membership applications for the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma from our website (http://www.choctawnation.com) or contact the Choctaw Nation CDIB/Membership Department at $1800 \Box 522 \Box 6170$ and applications will be mailed to you. Most tribes have similar information on their respective websites as well.

If you are also interested in finding out more about your ancestors, you can obtain copies of the census cards and application packets for your ancestor. The census cards will give information about other family members who might have been enrolled and the names of the enrollee's parents. The application packets may contain transcripts of any testimony taken by the Dawes Commission, birth and death affidavits, marriages licenses (sometimes), and correspondence between the Commission and the applicant. You can receive copies of your family members' packets by sending an email to genealogy@choctawnation.com with your request. Include your mailing address and the census card number and ancestor's name for each card and application packet you would like to order. There is no fee. You can also order copies for a fee from a regional branch of the National Archives (the Fort Worth, Texas branch is the main repository) or the Oklahoma Historical Society. Fold3.com

(http://www.fold3.com) now has the Dawes Commission census cards and application packets available online as well. It is a subscription website, but many libraries and archives have subscriptions which you can use for free by using their computers.

If you hit a brick wall and need help or just need more information, contact the Choctaw Nation

Genealogy Department at genealogy@choctawnation.com or call (580) 924-8280 or 1-800-522-6170. We are here to help you in your search.

Good luck in your research!

McKee, J. D. Interview 13228

Field Worker's name: Johnson H. Hampton Date: March 15, 1938 Name: Mr. J. D. McKee Address: Soper, Oklahoma Date of Birth: April 23, 1861 Place of Birth: Missouri Father's place of birth: Missouri Mother's place of birth: Missouri

An Interview with Mr. J. D. McKee, Soper, Oklahoma

I was born April 23, 1861, in Missouri, and we came to the Indian Territory in 1876. It took us three months to make the trip, we came over in two covered wagons. We had started to Texas, but when we came to the Indian Territory we stopped at a little village called Banty, and went to work. I don't know just where it was for I was quite small when we stopped there. We got work there and lived there for a good while, maybe a year or two, then went on into Texas where we lived on a farm and farmed there for several years until my father and mother both took sick and died and were buried there. I then left there and came to Garratts Bluff just across the Red River in Texas, where I lived and worked on odd jobs for awhile, then came across Red River into the Choctaw Nation and found a job with an Indian of the name of Bob Crowder for whom I worked on the ranch for about five years at which time I went to work for another Indian by the name of William Smallwood and I worked for him on the ranch for several years. Later I married his youngest daughter, she is still living and with me. This girl was a Choctaw Indian and I wanted to marry according to the Choctaw laws so I had to get a permit before I could marry her. I went down to the county clerk of Kiamichi County and bought some county scrip as it was called, I bought $100.00 worth for about $25.00 in money so when I got the permit I then was ready to get married to this girl. Her father had already given his consent so I took her to a preacher and got married. I then was a full-fledged Choctaw citizen and was subject to the laws of the Nation and had the rights Privilege just the same as the Indians, including the right to allot land, and got the payments like they did. I know of several white men who married Indian girls without getting the marriage permits, I don't know whether they just didn't want to or what the reason was but when enrollment time came all of them had to remarry the girl that they had married years before in order to get on the rolls and to participate in the allotment and payments.

After I was married I went to work and put in cultivation about fifty acres of land; it was not hard to clear this land for it was mostly on the prairie. I raised corn and everything that I could raise on a farm as I was a white man and knew how to farm and to raise crops; I also raised cattle, hogs and ponies. When I first married and was living there the whole country was wide open, no fences or farms to speak of and very little farming was done. Stock at that time was not worth anything at all, there was no market and we had to keep them until some of them died of old age. The grass on the prairies was as high as the head of a man on a horseback and the cane on the creeks was fine; the stock did not have to be fed, they could live and get fat during the winter seasons.

I did my trading at Paris, Texas; it was a long ways overland and by horse team and the road was not good. The river would get up and stay up for several days, that would keep us from getting home like we should and the small creeks would get up and stay up for a day or two that would also detain us so I began to trading at Nelson, a country store put up by two Indians, Coleman Nelson and his son-in-law, Charles Vinson. There was a post office there and I began trading with them; sometimes I would go down below where Hugo is now and trade some with Bill Spring who had a store in the Springs settlement. At that time the Indians lived in settlements and down where this store was in the Spring settlement I would go there and trade some with him. The settlement where I lived was called the Crowder settlement, they were all called settlements and it went by the name of some popular Indian who lived in that settlement. Down below the settlement where I lived was one known as the Stonkabee settlement, and it was that way all over the country.

My mother-in-law had a spinning wheel and a weaver that she used in making pants, shirts, and cloth, that is dress patterns, she would also make mittens and socks. She would spin the cotton and get it into threads and then would put these threads in the weaver and weave them into cloth and make dress patterns. After threads were spun she would get some red oak bark, bois d'arc chips and some kind of a root and boil them down and then she would put the threads into this pot and let them stay in there for awhile then she would take them out and put them up to dry. She would then take them and wash them and let them dry again. After they were dry the second time she would take them and put them into the weaver and weave them into cloth and it looked good, too. This cloth was a little heavy and thick but was good and stout, it was hard to wear out. She would spin cotton and wool for the mittens and socks and after she would get the threads rolled up into a ball she would take her knitting needles and knit socks and mittens, they were good heavy ones. When she would get them finished she would sell them for 50 cents per pair for the mittens and socks; she would get $1.00 per yard for cloth, $5.00 per pair for pants and $1.50 for each shirt. She did not get much money out of the goods she made for the people did not have much money in those days.

The Choctaw court ground was located between the two Boggys, I don't remember when it was built but Judge Loran Folsom was the first District Judge who held court there. We used to have a district Judge, prosecuting attorney, sheriff and juries just the same as we have today in the state court. When an Indian was arrested he was put under bond of some kind, it did not amount to much. When the district court met he would stand trial, he had all the protection that the law could give. He would have his lawyer who would be an Indian and we had some pretty good Choctaw lawyers. The person being tried had the right to reject any juror he wanted to, he would be tried by twelve peers as to his guilt or innocence. If he was found guilty the Judge would sentence him to so many lashes on his bare back, most of the penalties were whipping on the bare back, but if any one stole a horse and [was] convicted, stole another horse and was convicted, he was put to death by shooting so the Indians did not steal many horses. Just before statehood this court house was moved to Mayhew, a little village near Boswell. The old court house has been torn down and done away with but I understand the old jail is at Boswell and is being used by the town as a jail.

There were three ferryboats on Boggy, I don't know whether they were permitted by the Choctaw Government to run them or not but they did have the boats. One was at the mouth of Muddy Boggy and Clear Boggy, one was farther down the river and was run by an old Indian of the name of Hikumbee and the third was still below him and was run by a Indian of the name of Pitchlyn, I don't remember what his first name was. The roads that went from the ferry boats ran from there to old Doaksville which was then located north where Fort Towson is now, about a mile and a half.

When we came here there were lots of deer, turkeys and other wild game, also plenty of fish and Indians lived on these most of the time. The deer and turkeys went in droves in the Spring, you could see them by the hundreds out on the prairies and we used to get out and kill a few of them, it was no trouble to kill a deer or a turkey at any time.

When I first located in this country there were no white people here, the only white people we saw at that time were those who were going through the country stealing horses or something else. We had more trouble with them in this country than any other people, they would come and camp and stay there awhile and steal the best horses in the country and get away with the, for the Indian did not seem to care for them as they had lots of ponies anyway.

I have been to the Indian camp meetings and to their ball games, I have played with them in neighborhood games but not in match games. I saw Kiamichi and Jackson County play a match game but I never played in it, I was not good enough to play in match games like they had. I have been to the Indian cries as they were called, it is a very serious occasion when they have those cries but they have not had them for a long while. I think that they have quit having them since the white people began to settle the county and the surrounding country. I am a white man married into the Choctaw tribe and have lived among them for all of my life and I find them to be good people, they are law-abiding people and honest and straight as any people can be.

I have in my possession a spinning wheel that I would not let anybody have, it is broken but I would not take anything for it. I also have a wagon wheel which came from Mississippi when the Choctaws came from that country and I have a .44 Winchester, one of the first that came out when those guns came out. I am now living where I first made my home after I was married and will live there until my death, you can see how old I am by this sheet and my wife is about seventy years old now and is still living and doing her housework.

Cemetery Project - McKee Family Cemetery

Choctaw County Genealogical Society Photographs County Cemetery

The Choctaw County Genealogical Society recently photographed and indexed the McKee Cemetery, north of Soper, OK. The Society had asked if anyone had information about the cemetery or had relatives buried in the cemetery to meet us at the cemetery. This group of wonderful people were waiting on us when we arrived.

They provided the Society with pictures, stories, and information about the headstones.

Those from the Choctaw County Genealogical Society that photographed and indexed the cemetery were Cindy Burkhalter, Sherri Cheek, April Makerney, Norm Pence, and Donna Head.

Thank you McKee Family!!

Looking for information on Mitte M. Risenhoover (Thompson) Sanders Caves. Mittie and husband, Elton Joel Sanders, lived in Gravelly, Yell County, Arkansas. About 1912, Mittie walked away from marriage claiming he was a poor provider, shed cruel and abusive behavior to her 2 children from a former marriage and was mean. Believe she met George H. Caves in Oklahoma (resided possibly in the community of Fort Towson.) In 1918, EJ Sanders brought a court case to the Chancery Court for the Danville District of Yell County, Arkansas; complaint in equity (bill for divorce) and affidavit for warning order (to bring Mittie) back to the Chancery Court to answer questions. I believe Mittie may have in turn made a complaint in equity also and petition for divorce - returning her name back to Thompson (her first married name). Mitte married George H. Caves on Aug. 22, 1917.

Any further information would be appreciated.
